EXT. PARK - DAY

A BOY, 5, sits on a bench. His feet swing, unable to reach the ground. He looks around, expectantly. He pulls a candy from his pocket, unwraps it and pops it slowly into his mouth. He holds the golden wrapper up to the sky, and looks through it.

Along the path walks a GIRL, 5, she carries a cloth bag. She stops at the end of the bench -- the boy is looking in the opposite direction. The girl coughs to get his attention.

The boy turns his head quickly, and begins to choke.

The girl rushes to the boy to pat him on the back. The sweet is propelled from his mouth onto the path.

BOY
That was my last one.

GIRL
Sorry.

The girl reaches into the bag, and pulls out a little tin.

GIRL
I brought a cake.

The boy shrugs.

GIRL
I made it myself.

The girl opens the tin -- a heart-shaped cake with pink icing and sprinkles is inside -- she looks proud.

GIRL
Happy Valentine's Day.

BOY
Today?

The girl looks doubtful.

GIRL
I think so. What day is it?

BOY
Tuesday.
(beat)
Or Wednesday.

GIRL
(shrugging)
Well, it's a cake. For lunch. Do you want some?

The boy nods enthusiastically.

The girl takes the cake from the tin, breaks it in two and gives the boy a piece. The boy takes it and, with a lick of the lips, bites off a large mouthful.

BOY
Mmm... Delishush.

The girl looks at the boy, and giggles. A large blob of icing hangs from the boy's mouth.

GIRL
Icing. On your lip.

The boy attempts to lick it off on the wrong side.

GIRL
Other side.

The boy's tongue slurps the icing into his mouth.

GIRL
Funny boy.

The boy pulls a face.

The girl looks at him adoringly -- leans her face to his.

GIRL
My dear funny boy.

The girl kisses the boy.

MATCH CUT:

EXT. PARK - DAY

An OLD WOMAN is kissing an OLD MAN.

The old man's hand moves up to the old woman's cheek.

OLD MAN
You make me feel...

OLD WOMAN
I know what you mean.

The old man smiles and turns to his front, and continues eating his cake.

The old woman gazes affectionately at the hunched old man, and takes another bite of cake.

The old man and old woman sit side by side eating cake.
